

Adam to Fergus

Timeline	Reference
Adam down through the generations to Noah. Then Japheth son of Noah, then Magog son of Japheth. The Gaels (Irish) and Scythians are descended from Magog	Lebor Gabála Érenn (an early Irish chronicle).
Goídel Glas(Gaidheal, Gadelas). Goídel's offspring, the Goidels (Gaels), leave Egypt at the same time as the Israelites (The Exodus) and settle in Scythia. They eventually leave Scythia and after hundreds of years find their way to Spain.	Lebor Gabála Érenn
The Milesians who settled in Ireland are the descendants of the Gaels.	Lebor Gabála Érenn
Eber (Hiber) and Eremon were descendants of the Milesians. All the great Irish chieftains were descended from them	The Illustrated History of Ireland. Mary Francis Cusack
Simon Brech (or Breac), a descendant of Eber (Hiber) was crowned King of Ireland in about 700 BC and placed the marble chair (which he had brought from Spain) in Tara, the traditional seat of the Irish kings, where many successive kings were crowned after him.	Holinshed's Chronicles
According to Holinshed's Chronicle, one of the successors of Simon Breac was called Rothesay. In his time the people had multiplied and he transported some of them to the Ebonides, the islands which we know as the Hebrides. This was how the Scots originally came to the land we know as Scotland. By about 600 BC the Scots had settled in a place called Argathelia, (after Goídel Glas, Gaythelos) which we know as Argyll.	Holinshed's Chronicles
At some point in the 4th Century BC there was a king in Ireland called Ferguhardus. He sent his son Fergusius to help his fellow Scots in Albion who were at war with the Picts. Fergusius came to Albion (North Britain/Scotland) with an army and the marble chair. He was crowned upon the chair, also known as The Chair of Hope, in Argyll as the first king of the Scots in about 327 BC.	Holinshed's Chronicles
